Greetings, Students

Campus shouldn't be a place of terror for you; rather, it should be an exciting location to start your future awareness. It's about discovering your potential, making friends, and learning new things. Any behaviour that injures someone physically or psychologically, humiliates them, or intimidates them has no place here. Not only is it a grave offense with severe repercussions, but it can also destroy someone's college career. Join forces with your other students, speak out against bullying when you witness it, and assist anyone who confides in you.

Let's work together to establish a welcoming, safe space where everyone can develop and learn. Together, let's establish a welcoming environment where everyone can prosper. Recall that you are entitled to a respectful environment. Don't be shy about speaking up. You have the power to stop ragging with your voice. Recall that speaking up is essential to putting an end to ragging and that you deserve respect!

Anti- Ragging Cell-2019-2020

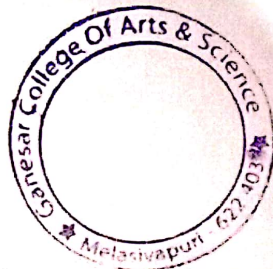

Report 2019-2020

For the academic year 2019–2020, newly admitted students receive an affidavit against discrimination. Each student must swear, under penalty of law, that they will not engage in or support ragging within the College. It is also made plain that there will be severe repercussions and legal action for any instances of ragging at the college. To spread awareness, a large number of anti-ragging posters have been placed all over the college campus. Newly admitted students receive a thorough orientation covering the college's anti-ragging policies. This include letting people know about the Anti-Ragging reporting forms and the Anti-Ragging helpline number. The website provides the anti-ragging committee's contact details for ease of use in the event that any ragging incidents occur. Thus, the committee has not heard anything.

Justification

The anti-ragging report and circular for the academic year 2019-2020 showcased the Ganesar College of Arts and Science's ongoing dedication to maintaining a ragging-free environment. By mandating affidavits against ragging and making clear the severe legal and institutional repercussions, the college emphasizes its zero-tolerance stance. The comprehensive orientation sessions, along with widespread anti-ragging posters and accessible contact details for the Anti-Ragging Committee, ensured that students are well-informed and supported. The proactive measures, including the constitution of Anti-Ragging Squads and Committees, demonstrate the college's commitment to preventing ragging and fostering a respectful and safe academic community. The absence of reported incidents reflects the effectiveness of these measures and the college's success in creating a secure environment for all students.
